

Biblische Zeitschrift in Verbindung mit der Redaktion der "Biblischen Studien", 1906
Dr. Joh. Göttberger, Dr. Jos. Sickemberger
The Princeton Theological Review 5:668. [1907]

This periodical, published by Roman-Catholic scholars, in the numbers lying before us throughout maintains the high standard, both as to learning and conservatism, it set for itself in the first three years of its existence. Especially exegesis and introduction are well represented by a series of valuable articles. What we miss are contributions dealing not so much with the externals of Biblical science as with the great historical and doctrinal problems now under debate. The comparative neglect of this is especially noticeable in the installments of the year under review. There is not a single article dealing with a biblico-theological question. The bibliographical notices at the close of each number continue to prove a most interesting and instructive feature of the publication.
